Kashana is situated within a historic building in the artistic retreat of Omaruru. Originally built in 1907 as a casino catering to nearby mineworkers, the name "Kashana" is likely to have been derived from the expansive bush savannah surrounding it, resembling a vast open plain, known as "Kashana" in the Owambo language.

After enduring wear and tear, meticulous restoration has revived the building to its former grandeur, highlighting its German colonial heritage.

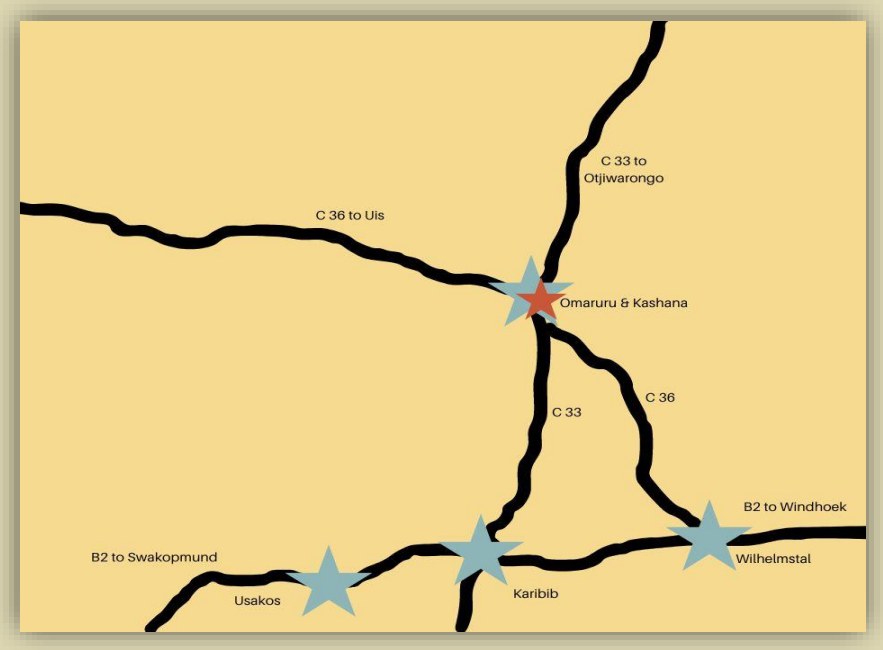

Reopened in 2007, it now serves as the focal point of a Lodge-style Guesthouse, featuring a charming bar and a popular all-day à la carte restaurant.

Drawing Kashana's guests and locals alike, it offers a serene garden dining, under the canopy of old trees, whilst the town itself is home to two wineries and tasting rooms and a root carver's market.

ACTIVITIES

The Franke Tower is just a short walk up the road from Kashana, and quite popular with the tourists.

Mission House and Church Missionary was founded in 1870 (which is also believed to be Omaruru’s founding date), by Gottlieb Viehe.

Half or Full day excursions to the Erongo Mountains are offered, allowing guests to visit the impressive rock paintings and experience the living museum of the SAN tribe in the area.

Omaruru as a town offers an enticing array of attractions, including an art gallery, goldsmith, wood carving workshop, antique shop, photo gallery, chocolate factory, and TWO wineries - These establishments offer a chance to immerse yourself in Namibian culture and interact with locals, providing a personal and authentic experience.
